Glutton Guide Beijing: The Hungry Traveler's Guidebook (Food Guide)

Synopsis

Eat Your Way Through Beijing Searching for the best Peking duck? Hungry for hard-to-find regional delicacies?? Glutton Guide Beijing: The Hungry Traveler's Guidebook can help you plan a food-focused trip through China's capital. The guidebook written by foodies for foodies, Glutton Guide answers all the questions you have when planning a trip to Beijing. Highlighting the city's most authentic and delicious foods, Glutton Guide leads travelers to local treasures that are easy to miss and often hard to find unless you know exactly where to look and what to order. In addition to an overview of Beijing's best street foods, regional cuisines, tea & nightlife, you'll find a guide to the city's best noodle joints, street food safety information and a handy getting around guide. Glutton Guide Beijing helps readers make the most of every moment in the city, providing bilingual ordering guides as well as map links for all listings in the guide. All you have to worry about is working up an appetite!

About the Authors:

After first visiting Beijing in 1994, Cat Nelson has been in China since 2010 and spent most of that time living in the city's farther reaches. As a food and drink editor first for the Beijinger, then for Time Out she delved into the capital's finer side, from meeting Michelin-starred chefs and sampling molecular gastronomy to exploring the growing local organic scene. But she has always remained the first to try the latest greasy hole-in-the-wall.

Jonathan White arrived in Beijing at the start of 2007 (before the Olympics changed the city forever) and spent those first 18 months sampling street food that would make his mother turn up her nose. After several years at the helm of the Beijinger where he expanded the dining coverage to include more Chinese cuisine he founded The Cleaver Quarterly, a print-only magazine dedicated to telling the story of Chinese food all over the world. His work has also appeared in Lucky Peach and Roads & Kingdoms.

About Glutton Guides: Don't read these guidebooks on an empty stomach! Glutton Guides is stepping out as the first and only global, locally written guidebook series to focus solely on the dining scene of its destinations. Each e-guidebook in the Glutton Guides series is written by culinary experts based locally in each target city they're there so there's no crowdsourced information in the well-curated content. Glutton Guide writers condense the city's dining scene into one easily digestible resource that is regularly updated so readers don't have to worry about outdated listings. Glutton Guide is also available in Melbourne, Shanghai, Prague, Buenos Aires & Burlington.
